The Power of Conservation is in Your Hands

On November 2&3, 2021, approximately 200 farmers, land owners, agronomists, and other conservationists will convene in Provo for the annual conference of the Utah Association of Conservation Districts.

38 Utah conservation district are directed by elected officials charged with helping implement land use plans that effect all Utah residents. Districts work to create strong relationships with producers and landowners. Throughout the year, Utah's 38 districts work with local farmers, forester, landowners, consultants, companies, and government agencies to promote conservation.

I invite you to support and engage in conservation while connecting with Utah's conservationists. Supporting local conservation efforts is an investment in the future of your business, in the integrity of our natural resources, and in the quality of life for future generations.

Sincerely,

Allen Henrie, President UACD
